NOTICE

When you apply for a Zoning Hearing, you are asking the Zoning Hearing Board for some kind of relief. The burden of proof is generally on you and therefore you should bring whatever evidence you need to support your application and prove your case.

You must bring a plan of your property, drawn to scale, showing all improvements on the property. The plan must show the location of the immediate neighboring houses and any other relevant information.

If you do not produce sufficient evidence to support your case, the Zoning Hearing Board may deny your application or choose to continue the hearing another night.

In order to obtain a Variance, you must show that there is some unique physical characteristic applicable to your property which imposes an undue hardship preventing you from the ability to use the property in accordance with the Zoning Ordinance.

The Zoning Hearing Board conducts formal hearings and you need to be able to present a case in which evidence supports your request.
